A new breed of automated retailer is here, and just in time for the world's largest display of health & athleticism - the 2010 Winter Olympics. Equipped with digital LCD screens, credit-card readers, and eco-friendly, energy-saving features, H.U.M.A.N. "This area is considered to be one of the healthiest places in the world regarding outdoor recreation, yet convenient access to nutritional snacks and beverages is not readily available," explains Clare Smith, Whistler resident and local H.U.M.A.N. operating partner. "We need to back-up our reputation as a premier center of health, athletics and environmental-sustainability by integrating eco-friendly, healthy vending machines across town."

Designed for high-end hotels, secondary schools, health clubs, and recreation areas (i.e. ski lodges), H.U.M.A.N.'s healthy vending machines will roll-out in Whistler this January. The machines are 100% free to locations, and the proceeds generated from the machines are split between the location, the local machine operator and charities that fight childhood obesity and malnutrition.

The precise locations of the premium healthy vending machines will be finalized by the end of December according to Andy Mackensen, Managing Partner of H.U.M.A.N. Andy reported that the H.U.M.A.N. location development team is currently in Whistler and Vancouver determining which locations will be the best fit for H.U.M.A.N.'s machines.

"I can't imagine a better time to launch in the region," said Sean Kelly, biomedical engineer and CEO of H.U.M.A.N. "With the new year being the pinnacle of health activity during the calendar year and the 2010 Winter Olympics coming into town in February, now is the perfect time to give locations the opportunity to offer their customers the healthy food and beverage service they want & deserve."
